

The Oasis

You and the Other Financial Personalities

Financial personalities sharing similar traits are very comfortable around each other and reinforce each other's good or bad behaviors. Other financial personalities possess opposing traits, which can lead to conflict or bring out the best in each other.

INSIGHT

The Adventurer

Adventurers seek to explore the world while Oases much prefer exploring their own minds, but there's hardly a pair who thinks deeper or solves problems as well as they do together. While finance doesn't rule their decision-making, if they need to, they can create financial excellence.

The Ambassador

Oases' love of occasional solitude can sometimes disrupt Ambassadors' love of being around people and creating strong groups. But by keeping groups small and talking through decisions, they can solve any problem and be happily stress-free together.

The Architect

Strategy is the name of the game here. Oases are deep-thinkers and Architects are tactical planners. So together they can out-think most any problem. But their focus on thinking can cause them to delay acting and not openly communicate, which can stress any relationship.

The Contrarian

With Contrarians not caring about opinions and Oases' need for solidarity, they both are so focused on their individuality that they can strain each other as a pair. But by taking an interest in each other's thoughts and opinions, they can avoid many common conflicts.

The Free Spirit

Free Spirits chase a new experience every day but Oases are more focused inward than outward. Together they can bring each other out of their comfort zones with a balance of exploration and quite self-reflection, or it could cause a lot of spirited discussions.

The Guardian

Guardians' ability to break down problems together with Oases' focus on solving 1 problem at a time makes this a great pairing for problem-solving. They do tend to focus only on short-term goals, but by pulling their heads up, they'll avoid both financial and relationship issues.

The Oasis

Quiet nights with a book, a few friends or a deep conversation is what happens when 2 Oases are paired together. Their ideas are always thoughtful and insightful but when around more boisterous people, or even each other sometimes, they can struggle to have their voices heard.

The Rock

Rocks are cool under pressure and Oases can quickly dissect any issue, so as a pair they talk through issues and can calmly solve them. But that's only if they're aware of the need to work together. Otherwise they risk staying in their solitude and stumbling because they didn't collaborate.

The Spark

Sparks are never shy to share their emotions with anyone while Oases are never that open with strangers. Together they can tend to get locked inside their heads, but if they create an open line of communication, they can be successful in life and their finances.

The Storyteller

With enough practice, Storytellers — social butterflies — and Oases — introspective thinkers — can balance each other. But in most cases these 2 can really stress the fabric of their bond while also pushing each other outside their comfort zones.
