

The Storyteller

You and the Other Financial Personalities

Financial personalities sharing similar traits are very comfortable around each other and reinforce each other's good or bad behaviors. Other financial personalities possess opposing traits, which can lead to conflict or bring out the best in each other.

The Adventurer

There's not a better traveling team — Adventurers love to explore new places and Storytellers love meeting new people — but it comes at a cost. That cost is money, and neither loves to worry about budgeting. But by taking the time to plan, they can be an unstoppable duo of fun.

The Ambassador

Ambassadors' abilities to arrange and manage groups and Storytellers being natural social dynamos make them a great social pair. Though they can hyper-focus on what's right ahead and lose sight of longer-term goals, by making a plan and working together, they'll be just fine.

The Architect

As a pair, they can seem unstoppable. Architects' organized plans and Storytellers' penchant for improvisation means no problem is too big for them to handle. But if either pulls too hard toward one extreme, their successful balance can crumble at its once rock-solid base.

The Contrarian

Contrarians don't worry about pleasing anyone while Storytellers have never met a person they didn't want to meet. Together they can create imaginative and crowd-pleasing magic or without enough mutual respect for their different approaches, implode in loud ways.

The Free Spirit

Being a natural pair, Free Spirits are searching for the next life-changing experience and Storytellers are looking for someone to tell about it. Their natural impulsiveness can lead to a rift if neither has a plan for the future, but they have the creativity to handle most problems.

The Guardian

Guardians patiently keep things close while Storytellers are all impulse and outward expression. But these differences don't always prevent them from thriving together. With life or finances, they can find a harmonious balance by communicating effectively with each other.

The Oasis

With enough practice, Storytellers — social butterflies — and Oases — introspective thinkers — can balance each other. But in most cases these two can really stress the fabric of their bond while also pushing each other outside their comfort zones.

The Rock

Storytellers' use stress for problem-solving energy and Rocks stay calm when surrounded by stress. So together they're ready for any type of stress, financial or otherwise, just as long as they stay in close communication and balance their approaches.

The Spark

Storytellers are happiest when connecting outward while Sparks focus on their feelings and how the world affects them. Their difference can create dynamic and passionate relationships, but can cause stress when neither knows how the other finds satisfaction.

The Storyteller

Quiet nights at home come few and far between when 2 Storytellers get together. Their need to be where the people are creates a really fun pairing for those around them, but they can strain their wallets and lives if they try to juggle every engagement.
