

The Adventurer

You and the Other Financial Personalities

Financial personalities sharing similar traits are very comfortable around each other and reinforce each other's good or bad behaviors. Other financial personalities possess opposing traits, which can lead to conflict or bring out the best in each other.

The Adventurer

When 2 Adventurers get together, they seek to learn and create while exploring the unknown. But they can get bored once something becomes repetitive. So routines like budgeting don't agree with either of them, but they also don't need money to be happy — just each other and an adventure.

The Ambassador

Adventurers investigate every nook and cranny, and Ambassadors are happy to come along. But neither is known for thinking through decisions, which can sometimes push the relationship from supportive to sour. With a watchful eye, they can have a fun relationship that's built to last.

The Architect

While both love to learn and explore, Adventurers' impulsive nature is counter to Architects' meticulous plans. But those differences mean that together with Adventurers' creativity and Architects' precision, they create a dynamite partnership.

The Contrarian

Contrarians take the unfamiliar roads. Adventurers travel down every road in sight. So they're testing every idea and loving it. But because money management can distract from trying new things, if neither wants to balance their finances, they can add unnecessary stress to their lives.

The Free Spirit

Adventurers and Free Spirits are enthusiastic explorers of the world, who tend to not worry about the costs of exploration. If they can work together when managing their money, they can avoid the financial and mental stress of living the life of explorers.

The Guardian

Adventurers seek out the new and different in life and finance while Guardians value the consistent and reliable. But, while vastly different, with balance, they can make a great pair — both pushing each other out of their comfort zones.

The Oasis

Adventurers seek to explore the world while Oases much prefer exploring their own minds, but there's hardly a pair who thinks deeper or solves problems as well as they do together. While finance doesn't rule their decision making, if they need to, they can create financial excellence.

The Rock

Adventurers are so excited to explore the unknown that when together with Rocks — consistent beacons of calm — they thrive. With Rocks reigning in the impulsiveness, this pair will be able to stay focused and creatively solve any issue. And they'll be having fun, to boot.

The Spark

Adventurers and Sparks get immediately restless if they're trapped in the same routine. By finding ways to keep things new and interesting, their pairing only gets stronger. But if they lose sight of their finances they can fall victim to the financial stresses that can ruin any pair.

The Storyteller

There's not a better traveling team — Adventurers love to explore new places and Storytellers love meeting new people — but it comes at a cost. That cost is money, and neither loves to worry about budgeting. But by taking the time to plan, they can be an unstoppable duo of fun.
